How to Find Us:

Transportation links to the area are excellent.

The airport is located on the site of the former Royal Air Force base Pembrey, and is positioned on a scenic coastal plain. It offers easy access to those who visit by plane or by car and is the perfect gateway to both South and West Wales. With road links in the surrounding areas recently upgraded, access is available to the main tourist resorts, industrial and business centres of South and West Wales.

The main London to Fishguard railway runs through the Pembrey Peninsular passing only 900 metres from Pembrey Airport boundary. This line connects London with the West Wales port from which the ferry sails to Cork in Ireland. The nearby M4 motorway provides excellent road access to Swansea, Cardiff and the east. A bus service runs every twenty minutes.

The Pembrey Peninsula...

Truly a Unique Investment Opportunity.

The peninsula is situated in Carmarthenshire, South West Wales, a region that attracts well over 2.4 million visitors a year. Visitors and tourists alike are drawn, not only to the outstanding natural beauty of the area, but also by the ambient weather. A wealth of local amenities provide a vast range of activities and entertainment to cater for visitors of all types and ages. We also have two railway stations on the main London to West Wales line within 3 miles.

These developments have received enthusiastic support from the Welsh Assembly Government, Carmarthenshire County Council, local Members of Parliament, County Councillors and many other organisations. All are committed to the future development and regeneration of the Pembrey Peninsula.

Regional Selective Assistance grants (which have no upper limits) may be available. In addition, the Pembrey Peninsula is situated within a designated European Union convergence funded area. As such, additional infrastructure grant funding can also be applied for to support investment in the area.
